berlin's kicken gallery will begin a new exhibition of works by ryuji miyamoto and j. mayer h. architects on may 2nd. the gallery was recently transformed by j. mayer h. architects with the addition of a movable two-part element, 'positive.negative', which enables the exhibition space to be modified. in addition to the new space, the architecture firm will display a variety of sketches, renderings and video from the 'positive.negative' project and many others. the work of japanese photographer ryuji miyamoto will also be on show. 'pinhole' is a series of large format crosses rendered in lush blue tones. the photos are taken using a small hut which he transformed into a camera obscura by covering all the interior walls in photo paper. he lies inside the box while the paper is exposed. the show will run until june 7th.
